God comes into our lives — right where we are at. He comes to us in the middle of everything else we are doing. The prophet Elijah goes out and finds Elisha out in the fields, where he is working. Jesus encounters people as he is walking through their towns and villages. He finds them in their homes, with their families. And that's the way he is also with each one of us. Jesus comes to us where we are at — in our homes, at work, in our social relationships. He comes to us in the people we meet, in the circumstances of our days. These are the places where he calls us and says to each one of us, where we are at: Follow me. And again Jesus is not calling us to leave our work or to turn our back on our families. No! Just the opposite. He is calling us to follow him where we are at — in our families, through our families, in our work, through our work. In the daily realities of our lives.

So whatever it is that we do every day, that's what we have to transform into a place where we find and where we encounter and where we share Jesus with the people around us. So when you are at home, with your children and your spouse, or when you are at work or with your neighbours. Every moment, you have a chance to follow Jesus. Every moment you have a chance to serve God! Jesus says to the man today in the Gospel: You, go and proclaim the Kingdom of God. And, my brothers and sisters, he's saying that to each one of us too! We don't have to "go" somewhere else. We can proclaim, and we are called to Proclaim, the Kingdom of God wherever we are. Because we can follow Jesus right where we're at. How do we do that? By always saying "yes" to what Jesus is asking of us. By serving others. By trying to make people's lives a little easier, a little happier. Because, my brothers and sisters, people should notice as they meet us, as they relate to us, that we are Christians! That we are followers of Jesus Christ.
